A formight or thereahouts ago our acute and courteous friand of the Cincinnati Enquirer asserted with a charpeen amounting almost to define the theory of Congress to pretect always in the Territories was not "a logical sequence" of the Dred Scott decision. Struck by the mingled and darity and absurdity of the assertion we refuted to the post with an emphasis not perhaps untinged with acoru. Our refutation was intended to be a settler. And we flattered ourselves that it was, 'tell who can be certain in this uncertain world? We were in doubt. Our Porkopolitan contemporary said nothing. Hy did nothing—not even aquirem. He was as still and as alkant as the grave. Was it the quiet of convictor? We were still in doubt. In fact, we grew positively meany. At length, after the lapse of a week or more, we noticed, to our ineagressible relating the paragraph, sinck away in an obscure corner of the Enquirer, in which we were politively termed "a disbonest knave." "Here," said we to ourselves, our reading the paragraph, if is the editor's rejoinder to our standing the paragraph, the week or more, we noticed, to our ineagressible relating the paragraph, sinck away in an obscure corner of the Enquirer, in which we were not after all milet ken.
